Angiotensin II and its ligands in the human kidney.

Angiotensin II (Ang II) is a biologically active peptide produced by the Renin-angiotensin system. Renal Ang II effects are diverse, ranging from vascular homeostasis to promoting renal fibrosis. In several renal tissues, angiotensin-converting enzyme inhibitors or Ang II receptor blockers

(ARBs) are used to treat and/or reverse Ang II-associated kidney damage. However, the expression of the renin-angiotensin system and its role in the human kidney has not been well characterized. Recent studies have shown that Ang II promotes renal fibrosis in a variety of experimental kidney diseases. In addition, the mechanisms by which Ang II exerts renal fibrosis are being elucidated. Here, we review and compare the expression profiles of the components of the renin-angiotensin system, namely, renin, angiotensinogen, and renin inhibitors (type 1, angiotensin-converting enzyme, and type 2) in the renal cortex and medulla, as well as local and circulating renin and Ang II levels in normal human subjects. Finally, we summarize the biologic effects of Ang II and its ligands in the human kidney, and discuss a promising approach to treating diseases associated with renal fibrosis. Email Signup); }); Thanks for any help in advance. A: There are two things you need to change. First, when you create your email signup form, you need to use a new method. The new method is:

Q: Should the name be a big deal? I often see people on this site ranting about the name of a question. Is this really an issue? While I don't like it, I'm willing to accept the name. I think it is for better or worse with the name of the site. What do you think? A: The rules of this community are simple: Use clear, reasonable, and correct titles. No, it's not a big deal, but there is no real reason not to improve it. So I would say it is worth considering if the question's title doesn't follow this guideline.
