Medical devices may be used in various environments. For example, medical devices, such as catheters, may be configured to be delivered through a patient's vasculature to a treatment site, such as a stenosed site in the vasculature. The medical device may be configured to deploy and/or retrieve an implant from the vasculature. Such implants may include an occlusion device, such as an embolic or stent device. An implant delivery device may be used to deliver an implant from a loading region to a deployment region. The loading region may be proximate a proximal end of the device, and the deployment region may be located further from the proximal end. In some examples, the implant may include a device body that carries an implant, such as an occlusion device, such as a stent. In some examples, a proximal end of the implant delivery device may be connected to the implant by the device body. For example, a proximal end of a delivery device may be connected to an implant by the delivery device body. Problems may arise when attempting to connect the implant delivery device to the implant. For example, the implant delivery device may have sharp edges, and a surface of the implant delivery device may be formed with a roughened surface. If the sharp edges of the implant delivery device are brought into contact with the implant, the sharp edges may damage the implant. It may be desirable to improve methods of attaching an implant delivery device to an implant.I'm working on a character sheet. There's a couple sites that I like to use for the likes of Pokemon cards and Power Rangers stuff, but I'd like to find more character specific sites. If you're looking for a character sheet, the very first post on this page has a few good ones. It's fairly well organized, and if you're using the option to add your own text, you can even write in each
