It was the first in a series of ten novels set in the fictional county of Yoknapatawpha County, which would later evolve into Lanier's magnum opus, A Song of Ice and Fire. Plot Lanier wrote the novel as a story in a general sense, rather than a novel in a literary sense. The novel follows the story of a European nobleman, Major Archie Rawlins, and his upbringing in Texas, towards the end of the American Civil War, and then his return as a wealthy man to England. Also featured in the novel are the adventures of Rawlins's best friend, Carvil "Cap" Carrol, a soldier who became a cattleman. The book is centered on the Texan character, and is often referred to as "Lanier's best novel", and is often considered the "first" western novel in the sense that the characterization of the hero as a strong, independent individual who did not fit into the standard European concepts of the period. In the novel, Rawlins never loses his American
