The epidemic of diabetes is straining the health care system while increasing financial costs. Research suggests that the onset of the disease can be delayed or prevented through improved lifestyle. This study is designed to test a 16-week nutrition intervention among overweight or obese adults to determine whether supplementation with an isoflavone supplement (genistein) can delay or prevent a diagnosis of diabetes. Other objectives include determining the effects of genistein on cardiovascular health risk factors such as blood pressure, fasting glucose, insulin, lipids, and blood chemistry. Outcomes will be assessed at the end of the study intervention, at 16 weeks and 24 weeks from enrollment.

Q: removing any result from regex match I have the following code

```
$prompt = "?q=Allerhäuschen"
$regex = "(?P(.*))"
$searchPath = "$ENV:searchPath\mpizur.com*.html"
$webPage = Get-Webpage -Search $searchPath -get $prompt
$match = $webPage.content | Where-Object { $_ -match $regex }
}
This will print results to the console that look like
Allerhäuschen Allerhäuschen Dachhühner
Allerhäuschen
I want to remove any instance where the Allerhäuschen string is printed to the console
So the following would be removed
Allerhäuschen Allerhäuschen
I know that you can test the string index to see if the 4 digit sequence is present and then remove it, but the implementation would be imperfect.
A: You can use the -replace operator and "remove a string that meets a certain criteria" using the -notcontains operator. This is quite like the -notmatch operator except it also checks for the second string. Try this:
$prompt = "?q=Allerhäuschen"
$regex = "(?P(.*))"
$searchPath = "$ENV:searchPath\mpizur.com*.html"
$webPage = Get-Webpage -Search $searchPath -get $prompt
$match = $webPage.content | Where-
```
