and mysql I've read several documentation regarding the use of MySQL with PHP and the corresponding node.js driver, but this is the first time I'm playing with Node.js/Javascript. So, I've setup a local environment, running my project in port 8080 with Node.js, Express, and the mongoid driver. In my routes, I've got a method that accesses a database to retrieve some data. My question is, what is the best way to instantiate my database connection? From what I've read, I should be using the 'res' object in Node.js. Can I use an instance of res from my routes or would I have to instantiate an object in my routes file and make it global? A: Based on the documentation Using MongoDB from Node.js Using the mongodb-native driver Instantiating a MongoClient is as easy as:

var MongoClient =
require('mongodb').MongoClient; var url ='mongodb://localhost/test';
MongoClient.connect(url, function(err, db)

{ if(err) throw err; // Do something with the db variable here db.close(); }); Q: A global function not recognised by PHP This is a script I've been working on the last few days and I don't understand what is going on. I've made a function called addExistingUsers(). I want to call this function in a different file called test.php. I've done this by including the file in the appropriate functions. But when I do I get the error Fatal error: Call to undefined function addExistingUsers() in /test.php on line 3 Now I've got absolutely no idea what this means. The function isn't linked to anything in particular. And I don't believe it's a misspelling as the name is all there. So anyone who can give me some pointers would be much appreciated. test.php
